About This Guide

Hello!

This resource guide has been prepared by the St. Charles Community College Career Services department to walk you through the job search process.

The examples used focus on students in our career and technical degree programs, but the techniques, tools, and general information apply to anyone about to undertake a job search. We hope you find it helpful.

In this booklet, you'll learn how to get ready for a job search, how to network, how to create resumes, cover letters, and reference lists. You'll learn best practices for filling out employment applications. You'll find lots of great information about how to prepare for job interviews and interview questions, and how to write great thank you letters. You will find information about how to dress professionally, negotiate your salary, and more.

We've included space in this guide for you to fill in your own information, so you can customize what you're learning to your own unique situation.

If you would like job search assistance, resume or cover letter help, a mock interview, a LinkedIn review, or help gathering professional attire for a work-related event, let us know. We are happy to help!

Best wishes for a successful and rewarding career!

Getting Ready for Your Job Search

It's important to get organized at the beginning of your job search. You need to figure out what organizational style works best for you. Create and maintain a job search file (either paper or electronic), and then stick with it. You will use this as you research potential jobs and companies of interest, and for each company that you contact and apply for a job with. It may be helpful to create a spreadsheet with information about each potential employer so that this information is well organized and easy to access.

Any job search begins with YOU taking time to consider where you want to live and work. Decide what type of job interests you. You should also consider what companies interest you as potential employers. You might want to talk to people you know for some ideas. Make a list of jobs and companies that interest you.

Using an internet search, identify companies in your desired location. Then, research companies that interest you, either on the internet or through people you know. As you do this, bookmark their websites, and take good notes. Different companies may have preferences about how they are contacted so make note of that. Save all this information in your job search file. You can then refer to it when you want to reach out to these companies.

You will use your job search file during your job search. Save copies of the job description or posting to which you applied and application materials you submitted for that job. You should also keep track of any emails or letters you send to that company, or that you receive from them. If they call you, take notes during the phone call, and make note of the date and time they called. Track any interviews you have with them. Be sure to follow up after a contact, application, or interview, and make note of that in your file. Keep track of all activity, contact, and communication with each company during your job search. This will ensure you don't miss anything.

The next step in getting ready for your job search is to research salaries and benefits of the jobs in which you are interested. It's important to have an idea of what a job pays. While we all would probably like to make more money, not all jobs (or employers) pay alike. You need to have an idea of what a person is compensated on average, with your skills, education, and experience compared to the average person performing this job.

Keep in mind that many jobs offer other benefits besides pay. So be sure to find out what type of benefits may be included in the job. This can include things like vacation and sick leave, health benefits, retirement plans, tuition reimbursement, profit sharing, and bonuses. Adding all that together will help you understand the total compensation for the job. Then you need to evaluate, how does the salary range compare to what your personal wants and needs are?

Professional Communication

Your next step is to create and use a professional email address. It's important to use a professional sounding email address when you are looking for a job. This helps establish your reputation as a responsible, trustworthy person to prospective employers.

An unprofessional email address can ruin your job search so avoid anything that is suggestive, flirtatious, generic, silly, or funny. Also, avoid using the year of your birth or graduation from high school.

Sometimes an employer will need to call you to request more information-- or to schedule an interview with you. There may be times when you cannot answer the call and the employer will need to leave a message. So be sure you create a professional voicemail greeting on your phone.

You should also evaluate your digital footprint. Take some time to do an internet search on yourself. You may be surprised at how much you find. Evaluate your social media presence, particularly your privacy settings. Differentiate between personal and professional contacts, especially where your online presence is concerned. Ensure that only those you trust have access to your social media screens, timelines, and posts. Be aware-- anything you post can be shared without your consent with screen capping.

Delete or deactivate any unwanted or unused accounts. If you don't own the account on which the content is posted, you can contact websites and ask them to remove many types of content about you.

Going forward, recognize that your online presence can impact you professionally. Think twice about what you post because it can't always be erased. Negative posts online could affect your career because employers can search you on the internet, too. Construct and maintain a professional online presence.

Now you are ready to set up an account with an online job search board. SCC uses Handshake for students and alumni. Use the instructions on the next page to complete your profile on Handshake.

Use the boxes on the next page to record information about your new professional email address account, write a professional voicemail greeting, and record your account information for Handshake.

Identifying Fraudulent Employers

There are some “red flags” students should be aware of to avoid fraudulent employers when using online job and internship sites.

Requests for financial/personal information are red flags.

Here are some examples:

- The representative asks you to use your personal email account not your SCC (.edu) account.
- You must provide your credit card or bank account numbers or other personal financial documentation. Do NOT give out any financial information at any point during your job-search and interviewing process.
- You are asked to provide your social security and driver’s license information in the initial application. Personal information should never be asked during the initial application process.
- The representative tells you that the organization does not have an office set up in your area and will need you to help get the office up and running. This scam often includes a request for your banking information, supposedly to help the employer make transactions.
- The position requires an initial investment, such as a payment by wire service or courier.
- You are offered a large payment or reward in exchange for allowing the use of your bank account, often for depositing checks or transferring money.
- You receive an unexpectedly large check to deposit into your bank account.

Remember: Never process ANY financial transactions.

For example, some organizations offer opportunities to “make quick money.” They will offer a “one-day only special.” Their intent is to defraud you by sending or wiring money to your bank account. They will ask you to cash the check or send the monies to other accounts. Once your bank or financial institution processes the scammer’s check or financial request, you may be informed the monies are invalid or “not real.” In the meantime, you are held responsible for the funds the bank has sent at your direction to other accounts.

An unusual salary is a red flag. Some typical examples include:

- The position indicates a "first-year compensation" that is in high excess to the average compensation for that position type.
- The salary range listed is very wide, e.g., "employees can earn from $40K - $80K the first year."
- The salary is listed as weekly, e.g., "$500/week". In the U.S., it is rare to see salaries listed as weekly.
- The position initially appears as a traditional job. Upon further research, it sounds more like an independent contractor opportunity.

Websites and emails can signal a problem. For example:

- The posting appears to be from a reputable, familiar organization, often a Fortune 500. Yet, the email handle in the contact's email address does not match the domain used by representatives of the organization; this is typically easy to determine from the organization's website. Another way to validate is to check the open positions on the organization's website by checking their careers/jobs webpage.
- The contact email address contains the domain @live.com or an @ that is not affiliated with the organization. Examples: @gmail, @yahoo, @hotmail. If this is the case, then verify that the email address matches what is found on the organization's website.
- You receive unsolicited email that is not specifically directed to you. Spammers/scammers can obtain student emails fairly easily. If the unsolicited email references a referral from your career center, contact your career center to verify the employer. (careerservices@stchas.edu)
- You are directed to a very basic website. Does the organization's website have an index that tells you what the site is about; or does it contain information only about the job in which you are interested? Scammers often create basic webpages that seem legitimate at first glance.

Other red flags include:

- The employer is hard to find. Scammers will try to keep themselves well hidden. Watch for anonymity. If it is difficult to find an address, contact name, organization name, or similar information, this is cause to proceed with caution.
- The employer contacts you by phone, but there is no way to call the representative back, i.e., the number is not available.
- The employer responds to you immediately after you submit your resume. Typically, resumes sent to an employer are reviewed by multiple individuals or not viewed until the posting has closed. Note: This does not include an auto-response you may receive from the employer once you have sent your resume.
- The interview is conducted online or over the phone, and an offer is given almost immediately.
- The posting includes many spelling and grammatical errors.
- The posting neglects to mention the responsibilities of the job. Instead, the description focuses on the amount of money to be made.
- When you Google the organization name, the results include spam reports about the organization. Another source for scam reports is www.ripoffreport.com.

Do an internet search for the employer's phone number, fax number, and/or email address. If it does not appear connected to an actual business organization, this is a red flag. You can use the Better Business Bureau, Hoovers, and Anywho to verify organizations.

You can also use social media to research each employer, e.g., Facebook, Twitter, Snapchat, and LinkedIn. Research the organization on websites such as Glassdoor.com for feedback and complaints.

Bottom line: If you have any questions or suspicions, contact your career center or campus police before pursuing any opportunity. If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is.

Networking

Networking is the process of establishing, building, and maintaining relationships as a source of gathering career information.

The easiest way to get a job interview is to talk to your friends, relatives, neighbors, and acquaintances. Everyone knows someone and you can expand your network by talking to your networking contacts.

To be effective at networking, you must show a genuine interest in the other individual and build a strong rapport by being polite, friendly, and enthusiastic. If you see a way to help someone in your network, do so!

Recognize the importance of the two-way nature of networking and mutually sharing information and advice; networking goes both ways!

Think about the people who you know:

- You have an inner circle of people that you know well and see often, such as friends and family.
- You have another group of people that you know less well and see sometimes. This group might be your neighbors, people you know from organizations, clubs, sports, or your faith community.
- You also probably have a third group of people that you know superficially and see occasionally. These people might be your medical professionals, insurance agent or banker, or people that you met at conferences, conventions, or events.

The people who you know have their own network of friends, relatives, neighbors, and acquaintances. For the most part, they will be happy to introduce you to the other people that they know. All you have to do is ask!

With just a little bit of effort, you can dramatically expand the size of your network, which can lead to greater access to information, including information about job opportunities. Do not forget to pay it forward, by helping others in your network.

Use the chart on the next page to start your own network.

STARTING YOUR NETWORK	Names	How might they help
Family
Friends/neighbors
Teachers/ College Professors
SCC Alumni
Work Associates
Religious/community organizations
Fraternity/Sorority Alumni
Clubs and Sports
Retailers/Service Providers
Others

There are many ways to network including in person, over the phone, and online.

Networking in Person:

- Research shows that 65% to 80% of job seekers find jobs through someone they know. This means that one of the easiest ways to find out about potential job openings is to talk to your friends, relatives, neighbors, and acquaintances. The more people you know, the bigger your network is.
- How do you get to know more people? By talking to people. Start by asking your friends, relatives, and acquaintances if they know of someone who could use your professional skills.

How do you network?

You start by telling people about yourself. To do this, create an elevator pitch, or a one-minute summary. Your one-minute summary should contain your most positive attributes, the type of work or position you are seeking and your skills, education, experience, and accomplishments that would enable you to succeed in this type of position.

When people say, “Tell me about yourself,” it is an opportunity to market yourself with the goal of the listener gaining interest in what you have to offer. Use your elevator pitch at a job fair, during a job interview, while networking, or at professional events. You could also use this in less formal situations such as parties, family events and holidays, and backyard barbeques.

Then, practice giving your elevator pitch! That way, when you need to use it in a networking setting, it is already second nature.

Tell people that you are in the job market. This can be done in person, by email, on the phone or online (e.g., Facebook, LinkedIn). Ask if they know someone looking for someone with your skills. If your contact knows of an opening, ask your contact to give your resume to the hiring manager or ask if you can use your contact's name when applying.

Ask for referrals. If no one knows of an opening, ask for a referral to a person who might have a job lead. Always contact referrals quickly!

Present yourself well to any contact or referral. Do this by showing interest in their work or field, being positive, friendly, polite, and organized, and being open to learning.

Always remember to write a thank you note to anyone who has helped you in your job search.

Elevator Pitch Examples

Example #1: “Hello. My name is Jordan Brown. I have four years of customer service experience in a variety of settings. I was promoted from cashier to customer service associate at my current job. I also train new employees on company policies and customer service duties. I have received excellent performance evaluations and have been complimented by senior management on my leadership skills.

Currently, I attend St. Charles Community College and plan to complete my Associate of Arts degree and then transfer to Missouri State University to study business administration. I am a member of Phi Beta Lambda business student organization and recently placed in the Business Ethics competition at the national leadership conference. I would love the opportunity to discuss how my customer service excellence and passion for helping a business succeed can contribute to your company’s goals. Could we schedule a time to meet for coffee?”

Example #2: “Hello. My name is Pat Davies. I am punctual, organized, and a quick learner. I currently work as a Certified Nurse Assistant at Delmar Gardens nursing home. I enjoy working with the patients and learning from the nurses. I received the “employee of the month award” this past June due to my enthusiastic and helpful attitude. My eventual goal is to become a Registered Nurse.

I am currently pursuing the pre-requisite coursework for the St. Charles Community College nursing program and hope to enter the program next fall. I am looking for opportunities to gain more skills in the field of nursing by working in a hospital setting. I look forward to learning about the opportunities at your organization and would love to set up a time to chat about this further. May I give you my résumé?

Use the worksheet on the next page to create your own elevator pitch.

Tell Me About Yourself: The Elevator Pitch (aka the One-Minute Summary)

Introduction: Your name and a list of relevant skills (transferable to the job you want) that describe you.

Background: Summary of your experience, education, and training (including any computer/technology experience).

Accomplishments: List a few specific examples that highlight what you can do. (e.g., “employee of the month” award, recognized for an achievement, or received an award).

Closing: Be sure you make the “ask”. What do you want the listener to do next? Call you, set up an appointment, give you a job lead, introduce you to someone, take your résumé, etc. You need to be clear. Of course, this statement might change depending on the circumstances of when you are using your one-minute summary.

Networking Over the Phone

Sometimes, you will want to network over the phone. It can be helpful to have a rough idea of what you want to talk about before you make the call. Many people find it helpful to use scripts for this type of conversation.

Using a script can help you be more confident when you're making calls to ask friends, family, or networking connections for a referral to a job, or to an employer that might be able to tell you about a job opening. You can write your own, so that your comments are in your own words, and you feel more comfortable about the conversation. Here is a sample script that you can use as a starting point. Feel free to change it up!

A Phone Script to Ask a Friend for a Referral to an Employer

- Call a friend: “Hi Jordan. I was wondering if you could help me with something.”
- Say exactly what you are looking for: “I’m looking for a computer aided drafting position.”
- Ask if they know of any job openings: “Do you know of anyone who is looking for a full-time drafter?”
- Get the name and phone number of the potential employer: “That's Kai Miller at Orchard Metallic Design?”
- Ask for more information about the person: “How long have you known them? Is Kai Miller the person who would hire a new employee?”
- Get a recommendation from your friend: “May I tell Kai Miller that you referred me to ask about a potential job opening?”
- Ask if they might be able to set up an interview: “If I give you my resume, could you give it to Kai Miller and ask if we could speak about a job?”
- Show your gratitude: “Great! Thanks so much!”
- Follow up: After the interview, let your friend or contact know how it went and thank them again.

Calling Potential Employers

You can use information gathered from a referral, or just use contact information you found through your job search research to call prospective employers. You might call them to ask if they have any job openings, or to arrange an informational interview.

Identify potential employers from your own list or referrals. Identify the department heads or specific managers in charge of an area where you would work. The company website usually has a directory where you can find out this information. Develop a phone script for yourself (see below for an example). Call these managers about possible openings in their areas. Ask for an informational interview. Remember to mention the name of any person who referred you.

A Phone Script to Contact a Potential Employer About a Job

- Introduce yourself and mention your referral person's name (if you have one): “Good morning. My name is Danae Smith, and I got your name from Chris Davis. Do you have a minute to talk?”
- Clearly state two or three highlights of your qualifications and the type of position desired: “I have an Associate degree in CAD (or “I’m currently enrolled in the Associate degree in CAD program at St. Charles Community College”) and work experience in a manufacturing environment. I am seeking a challenging CAD position either full-time or part-time.”
- If there are no current openings, ask to meet to discuss any future opportunities: “I am sorry to hear there are no openings at this time since your company sounds so interesting. Would you be willing to have a short meeting with me in case an opening does occur in the future?”
- Ask for leads to others who might be interested in your skills: “Is there anyone you can think of who might be looking for a CAD employee?”
- Be polite, even if nothing substantial comes from the initial conversation (they might have an opening later): “Thank you for your time and referral.”
- Follow up: Send a follow-up thank you note, along with your resume.

Use the box on the next page to write a phone networking script for yourself.

Write your own phone script here:

Networking Online

You can get a lot of networking done online these days! Search online job sites such as CareerBuilder.com, Indeed.com, Ziprecruiter.com, or SimplyHired.com for available positions. After creating an account, you can set up a resume on most of these sites.

You can also search specific company websites for vacancies. Many companies only post their open positions on their own website. Of course, you should register with SCC's free online job board, Handshake, to search local jobs and post your resume for local employers. You can do this at: stchas.joinhandshake.com.

Web sites and social media sites like LinkedIn, Facebook, etc. are some ways to communicate with people you know and to interact with others that might lead you to a job. These types of media are evolving daily, and employers are using them more and more to communicate with potential workers and to discover information about candidates. Look for local Facebook or Neighborhood app groups to find job leads. You can also connect with people who work in organizations or jobs that interest you.

You can also communicate directly with many potential employers through their social media channels including blogs, Facebook, Instagram, Pinterest, or LinkedIn accounts.

About LinkedIn

LinkedIn.com was created for the sole purpose of professional networking and interaction. Registration is free and only takes a few minutes, although if you want to build a complete profile, it may take longer. If you would like premium services (such as being able to connect with people who are not in your current network or whom you do not know), you can pay a monthly fee to upgrade your membership. For job searchers, a monthly investment of about $40 may be worth it to find a great career.

People from all types of industries and at all levels of technical, professional, and managerial responsibility are using it to keep up to date with new developments in their field, to share information with others, and to further their career aspirations.

Many employers post their job openings on LinkedIn, and you can search these to find jobs of interest to you. Recruiters use LinkedIn to find qualified candidates. This means if you have a well-developed LinkedIn profile, employers looking for prospective employees can find YOU.

Did you know 93% of companies use LinkedIn for recruiting, 80% of positions are filled through referral (networking), and 75% of hiring managers report that they looked at LinkedIn profiles.

Sometimes, employers will message candidates directly through LinkedIn's direct messaging system and request a job seeker apply to their position. This is a great way to find work!

Develop a LinkedIn profile today. Chances are, it will help you find a job.

Record your LinkedIn login information here:

Building a Strong LinkedIn Profile

The more complete your profile, the more professional contacts will find you, the more opportunities will come your way. Include keywords related to the work you're seeking in your summary statement. The summary statement gives you a chance to share the highlights of your bio in your own words. Be sure to include keywords and phrases that someone might type into a search engine to find a person like you. Uncertain about what words are most compelling and search friendly? Check out the profiles of other professionals in your field. Post a friendly, businesslike photo. Selfies are fine if they are professional looking.

If you don't have a professional photo available, Canva has an artificial intelligence tool that can edit photos you upload to make them LinkedIn ready. All you need to do is log in to Canva and upload an image of yourself that needs to be changed. Then, you'll need to go to edit photo and then magic edit. With magic edit you can change areas that need to be modified like an outfit or a background. Then, you'll want to describe what you want in the image such as a professional suit or an office background and click generate.

You can create a Canva account with your email address. You will need to create a pro account if you would like to access the artificial intelligence editing tool. To learn more about Canva pro and the tools available with this type of account, go to: <https://www.canva.com/features/ai-photo-editing/?tcs-token=0721cd729370a424ee78a9cde5b17a250d8fecb948b2c7c9fd8c7f51133cc55a>

If you choose to share your pronouns, they can be listed after your name, or in your About section. When editing your LinkedIn profile on your computer, you can't use the character “/”, however, you can use “/” when editing your last name on the LinkedIn app so if you want to add pronouns, do it from the app.

Write for the screen. This is not the place for long-form prose. Present your summary statement in short blocks of text with lots of white space. Bullet points are great, too.

List all relevant experiences. One of the most valuable aspects of LinkedIn is the way it connects you with former colleagues and classmates, who may turn out to be some of your best networking contacts. Add skills, professional associations, and interests to your profile. You can also add classes, publications, and more.

Connect! Send connection requests to friends, family, neighbors, co-workers, people in mutual clubs or organizations, classmates, teachers, and people you meet through networking efforts. Always include a personal note when sending a connection request. Not everyone will accept your connection request, and that is okay. Just move on to the next person.

Collect diverse recommendations. Nothing builds credibility like third-party endorsements. The most impressive LinkedIn profiles have at least one recommendation associated with each job a person has held. Think about requesting recommendations from colleagues and teachers. It is best to phone the individual first, and after they have agreed, send a request through LinkedIn for a recommendation.

Share your news. Post about events you attend, major projects completed, books you are reading, successes you are celebrating, or any other news that you would tell someone at a networking reception or on a quick catch-up phone call. However, keep it professional! This is not the place to share information about your family or your recent vacation.

Find some LinkedIn groups and join. These are communities of professionals based on common interest, experience, affiliation, and goals. Join a few and you will find areas for discussion, job postings, event announcements, news dissemination and more. You can discover new groups to join by searching in the search bar at the top of your homepage. Once you become a group member, you can like and comment on updates or view more group information.

Once you become a member of a group, you can access the other group members' profiles even if you are not directly connected to them. This is a great resource for finding the individuals who are involved in hiring for an organization.

LinkedIn has a free mobile app for students aptly named LinkedIn Students. The app version does not require you to complete the full profile like the web version of LinkedIn, so it may be an easier way to get started. However, the more information you add to your profile, the more relevant the app's recommendations will be.

How to Record and Display Your Name Pronunciation on Your Profile

If you choose to do so, you can record how to pronounce your name and display it on your LinkedIn profile for others to listen to. This will help LinkedIn members to correctly address you when they speak to you. Note: You currently cannot record or edit your name pronunciation on the LinkedIn desktop site. It can only be done on the LinkedIn iOS/Android mobile app.

Instructions for recording your name pronunciation for either iOS or Android are shown below:

Recording Name Pronunciation on the LinkedIn iOS app

- Tap your profile picture > View Profile.
- Tap the Edit icon from your introduction card.
- Tap Record name pronunciation.
- If you have already recorded your name, you can tap the Edit icon to delete or replace the existing recording.
- Tap the recording button and hold to record your name. Note: You can also cancel or preview the recording.
- Tap the Use button when you are satisfied with your recording. Note: You can also retake the recording.
- Tap Save.

Recording Name Pronunciation on the LinkedIn Android app

- Tap your profile picture > View Profile.
- Tap the Edit icon from your introduction card.
- Tap Record name pronunciation.
- If you have already recorded your name, you can tap the Edit icon to delete or replace the existing recording.
- Tap the recording button and hold to record your name. Note: You can also cancel or preview the recording.
- Tap the Use button when you are satisfied with your recording. Note: You can also retake the recording.
- Tap Save.

Your recording will display next to your name in your introduction card.

While recording be sure that the total recording time is within 10 seconds. Limit background noise. Speak slowly and pronounce each syllable clearly. Hold the phone three or four inches from your mouth.

Resumes, References, Cover Letters, and Job Applications

About Resumes

A resume is a document that describes your previous work experience, education, and characteristics. Think of it like a marketing piece for yourself; a one-page flyer that explains why you would be a good fit for a job. It is best to keep it about a page long. Your LinkedIn profile can be as detailed as you like, which makes it easier to edit your resume carefully to keep it to the appropriate length. The purpose of your resume is to convince the employer to invite you for an interview.

When you create a resume, you are making a template. You will edit this as needed, to customize your resume for specific jobs when you apply. Read the job description carefully and revise the resume template to highlight your transferrable skills from previous experience or education that meet the requirements of the job to which you plan to apply.

Several artificial intelligence tools exist online that can help you build your resume. Keep in mind that these are tools only. They are not intended to be used to create a final product. It is of utmost importance to review the resumes created by artificial intelligence to ensure that the information included matches your experience and is grammatically correct.

It is also important to not include confidential information when entering data into artificial intelligence tools. This information could include phone numbers, addresses, and LinkedIn URLs. Most artificial intelligence tools online specify that the information you enter becomes the property of the parent company.

When using artificial intelligence tools online, it is helpful to specify the tone and format you are looking to achieve, as well as the role you would like the tool to play; such as editor or teacher. Doing this helps the tool you are using know what type of document you are looking to create and the tone of voice you would like to come across. It also helps the tool identify what type of assistance you are in need of. There are many artificial intelligence tool cheat sheets available online that make using these tools much easier.

What should be included in a resume?

Resumes can be composed in many ways, but they should all follow some basic rules: the information must be accurate, concise, and easy to read. Use action words, and descriptions of accomplishments. Keep it to one page unless you have a great deal of experience (e.g., ten years or more).

How should a resume be organized?

Some headings are universal for all resumes and others might only apply to you. See the resume samples section for some different options and ideas. Always include:

- Caption: Your name, phone number, and email address (mailing address is optional). Include a link to your LinkedIn profile, if you have one. Do not include your pronouns on your resume. If you want to share your pronouns, do so on your LinkedIn page.
- Qualifications: This is bulleted list of your qualifications for the job at the top of the resume to catch the reader's eye.
- Education: College degrees. Begin with the most recent and work your way backwards. Include your GPA of 3.0 or better.
- Significant non-degree education: Such as certificates, licenses, and certifications.
- Experience: Most recent job first, working your way back. For each job, list accomplishments and transferrable skills. Try to show solid work history.

Optional Headings

Include this information if it is applicable to the job you are seeking and you have space.

- Activities and organizations
- Volunteer experience
- Professional memberships
- Special skills and foreign languages
- Technical skills: These could include computer skills as well as proficiency in the “tools of the trade” that are relevant to your objective.
- Honors and awards
- Internship (or practicum) experience

What should you include in the qualifications section?

Qualifications can be added near the top of the resume to highlight three or four of your personal attributes, such as:

- Three years progressive payroll responsibility
- Proven ability to multi-task and work with others
- Worked full time while maintaining 3.5 GPA in college

This information may also be included in your cover letter.

Chronological and Functional Resumes

Chronological resumes show growth and development in your work experience or education. These resumes are good to use if the job you want is similar to your previous jobs.

Functional resumes focus on skills across industries and are good to use if your employment history is scattered or the job you are interested in is not related to your previous work.

Evaluate your own work history and decide which format will work best for you.

What options will you include in your resume? Which format will you use, chronological or functional?

Make YOUR resume stand out!

To make your resume stand out, use brief statements instead of sentences. Describe your accomplishments in quality and quantity. Focus on transferrable skills: even though you may not have specific experience, you likely have skills or experience that can transfer to any job or career (e.g., customer service, organizational skills, people skills, etc.).

Compare these two examples. Which is more effective?

Candidate A: Sentence Format

- I worked as a cashier and waitress serving customers. When new waitresses were hired, I sometimes trained them.

Candidate B: Brief Statement Format Describing Tasks and Accomplishments

- Provided friendly and efficient service to customers in fast paced restaurant
- Balanced cash drawer without errors
- Trained new employees, assuring company standards were met

The duties and activities are the same, but most employers would be more interested in talking to Candidate B, who used brief statements describing their work tasks and accomplishments.

What makes B better?

- Responsibilities and duties were written as phrases, not long sentences.
- Each phrase begins with a verb.
- Each phrase has an accomplishment.
- Quality work was indicated in both customer duties and cash activities.
- The person shows an understanding of good business behavior (quality and standards).

You should also consider adding these skills to your resume:

- Self-learning: If you have taught yourself computer or technology skills, highlight these on your resume
- Social media experience: In today’s job market, those with social media skills are highly sought-after.
- Freelance projects: Every project you complete, whether you are paid or unpaid, can show the employer your relevant experience.
- Content creation: Are you a blogger or do you have a YouTube channel? Let employees know about your creative side.
- Industry relevant competitions: Do you go to Phi Beta Lambda competitions? This is a great accomplishment to note.
- Leadership roles: All employers are looking for leaders. If you have led a student group or community organization, do not be afraid to share this on your resume. If you attend conferences for your student club or organization (e.g., PTK or Student Government), or you presented at a conference, go ahead, and add this to your resume.

What are some things you should include to make YOUR resume stand out?

Web Friendly Resumes

Many companies accept resumes only via the internet and often a computer is scanning your resume, not a person. Scanners look for clear, concise information. If your resume is not formatted properly, the resume tracking system may not be able to pull specific information and the resume may never get into the employers' database.

Use these hints to increase your success:

- Use simple fonts such as Arial, Calibri, Georgia, Helvetica, Tahoma, and Verdana and a standard font size (11, 12, or 14).
- Use bolded words sparingly.
- Do not underline, use italics or all capital letters.
- Use clear, concise phrases – no sentences.
- Repeat skills listed in the job description or job ad within your resume (e.g., communication and writing skills, computer skills, etc.).
- Include all pertinent jobs and education.
- Use Microsoft Word doc, docx, PDF (preferred), txt, or rtf formats (do not use HTML or Open Office because these may give broken text and/or fail to open files into text).
- Save your resume as firstnamelastnameresume.
- Never scan and send your resume as an image.
- Don't use tables as this will break the continuity of the resume when read by applicant tracking software.
- Try to follow the standard date format of MM/DD/YYYY or you can use month name, year (e.g., May 2023) and use consistent format throughout the resume.
- Do not use any special characters such as: () /- with your name.
- Don't use extra spaces between each letter of your name.
- Always start your brief statements with a verb (or action word). This creates a sense of energy and action. You can use the list on the next page for ideas.
- Remember to talk about your skills, why they are important, and how they helped you get to a desired outcome in the past.

About Cover Letters

A cover letter can provide a potential employer with information that cannot easily fit on a resume. For example:

- Why are you interested in this job/company?
- What special skills might you bring?
- Did someone refer you?
- Do you have experience/skills in addition to those listed on your resume?
- Are there any gaps in your employment? You can explain this briefly in the cover letter.

A cover letter also gives you the opportunity to demonstrate your ability to write clearly. Your correct spelling, proper grammar, and complete and informative sentences can be an additional motivator for an employer to ask you for an interview.

You should always include a cover letter with your resume. Revise it each time, to be relevant to the position you are seeking. Look at the job posting to help you write a relevant cover letter.

You should always address the letter to an actual person. If you do not know the name of the hiring manager, you can use the human resource manager's name. It is easy to find this on the company's website.

In the greeting, do not use Mr. or Ms. Use the person's actual name (e.g., "Dear Jordan Moss"). If you cannot find the name, "Dear Hiring Manager" or "Dear Human Resources Director" could be used.

When preparing your cover letter, be sure to use the same font and font size you chose for your resume. These are marketing materials for your job search, so you want them to have a consistent look.

In the next few pages, you will find examples of cover letters with an explanation of how each part is put together, and then samples of cover letters. We have included a sample cover letter to upload with your online job application, and samples that you could email (for companies who do not have online job applications).

About Cover Letters (Continued)

Several artificial intelligence tools exist online that can help you build your cover letter. Keep in mind that these are tools only. They are not intended to be used to create a final product. It is of utmost importance to review the cover letter created by artificial intelligence to ensure that the information included matches your experience and is grammatically correct.

It is also important to not include confidential information when entering data into artificial intelligence tools. This information could include phone numbers, addresses, and LinkedIn URLs. Most artificial intelligence tools online specify that the information you enter becomes the property of the parent company.

When using artificial intelligence tools online, it is helpful to specify the tone and format you are looking to achieve, as well as the role you would like the tool to play; such as editor or teacher. Doing this helps the tool you are using know what type of document you are looking to create and the tone of voice you would like to come across. It also helps the tool identify what type of assistance you are in need of. There are many artificial intelligence tool cheat sheets available online that make using these tools much easier.

Re: the title of the job or position

Dear FirstName LastName: (the hiring official's name or Hiring Manager if you cannot find one)

The opening paragraph is your introduction to the reader. It should include the following: your reason for writing, why you are interested in the organization, the name of the position for which you are applying, and how you became aware of the opening (job board, a referral, etc.).

In the second paragraph, refer to your enclosed resume. Highlight specific skills, achievements, qualifications, and/or training that are relevant to the position you are pursuing. Why should the employer be interested in you? You are addressing this question in this paragraph. If you have qualifications that are not noted on your resume, this is your opportunity to discuss them. Try not to repeat exactly what is already on your resume! Divide this paragraph into two paragraphs if necessary. You may also use this paragraph to address any "red flags" on your resume, anything that you think might keep an employer from wanting to interview you (e.g., a gap in your employment history, "job hopping," etc.).

The closing paragraph thanks the employer their time and states what you plan to do next (such as following up in a week) or what you would like the recipient to do next (call to schedule an interview).

Sincerely,

First Sign Shop
1380 Chestnut Hill Road
St. Charles, Missouri 63304

Re: Graphic Artist Position

Dear Morgan Smith:

Attached is my resume in response to your ad for a Graphic Artist that was posted on Handshake at St. Charles Community College.

This position with First Sign especially interests me because it involves the design, fabrication, installation, and repair of signage and emphasizes creating unique signs for each of your customers. I enjoy being part of a creative team that follows a project from start to finish and that assures customer satisfaction.

My courses at St. Charles Community College have included three commercial design classes, digital imaging, and Macintosh page layout in addition to business writing and oral communication. I also have experience working with Microsoft programs and would be comfortable using either Mac or PC formats.

I would welcome the opportunity to meet with you to share my design portfolio and discuss how I might be able to contribute to the First Sign Shop. I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

About References

Most employers will ask job candidates for a few references to confirm work history, character, and job suitability. Three professional references are usually fine.

- The best references are past supervisors and college instructors.
- You may also use a current or previous co-worker or a long-time professional acquaintance.
- Do not use relatives or friends (unless that relative or friend also happened to be your supervisor).

Always ask permission from a reference BEFORE giving the person's name and contact information to an employer. Design your reference sheet just like your resume and match the way you did your name/address heading, font, font size, and paper if you are using a hard copy set of application materials.

Reach out to people in your network who might be willing to serve as professional references for your job search. You might want to write a script for yourself to use when making these requests. Ask the person if they'd be willing to help you. If they are, take careful notes about their contact information.

You can use the box below to record your references information so you can transfer it to your reference list later.

About Job Applications

Applications screen out candidates, so never use them as your main strategy for gaining an interview or finding a job. Most employers will have you complete an online application as one of the steps in the screening process. Always submit your resume with the application. Set aside enough time to complete an online application, as sometimes the system will “time out.”

Also, make sure you have your resume with you so you will have pertinent dates. You will also want to have the addresses, phone numbers, and names of references. If you are unable to complete the application in one sitting, and there is a “save” option, so make sure you use that and go back to finish later.

Tips for completing an employment application:

- Read and follow directions carefully. Employers notice mistakes.
- When completing a paper application, use a pen, not a pencil. Use black or blue ink only. If you make a mistake, do not scratch it out, simply draw a line through the mistake and write the correct information. You can also use correction tape. Try to be as neat as possible. Do not write in cursive if it says print.
- Be positive, but honest. Do not lie on your application.
- Add positive information whenever you can. In the work experience section, mention any promotions, additional responsibilities given, etc. Describe your strengths if there is a “comments” section. You can also write “see resume for more details.”
- Do not state a specific salary requirement. Write “open” or “negotiable.” If asked directly, indicate a range of salary, such as “$50,000-$65,000 per year” or “$18-$22 per hour”.
- If asked about working weekends, evenings, etc., the best response is “will consider other shifts” or a simple “yes.”
- Never write “fired” as reason for leaving. Try to express the reason more positively, such as “looking for more responsibility and a challenging position,” “the company downsized,” or “went back to college to further my education.”

Interview Preparation, Interviews, and Thank You Letters

About Job Interviews

A job interview offers you and the employer a chance to learn more about each other and independently decide if this job and organization is a good fit for your skills and temperament. The ideal interview is a two-way street where you both talk and listen.

What makes an interview successful? Preparation and practice. Knowing yourself and know what kind of work activities and environment you are seeking will help you select the right jobs to apply for and will help you do your best in job interviews.

How to Prepare for Job Interviews

Take time to reflect on yourself and all your facets: Personal, academic, and professional. Doing some of the exercises throughout this guide will help you in this.

You should also take time to research the employer and the position. To learn more about a company and to prepare for your interview, it is important to research the company ahead of time. By doing so, you will be able to intelligently discuss specifics about the company. You will also be prepared to ask questions at the end of the interview. You can find valuable information by going directly to the company website. In addition, most companies have a LinkedIn page, so you can research them there as well.

Here are some sites that may help you research a company:

- <https://careersidekick.com/research-company-before-job-interview/>
- <https://www.glassdoor.com/index.htm>

You can also do an internet search to see what types of news stories or press releases may come up about the employer. Make notes on anything interesting to you so you can ask questions about that during your interview.

Evaluate the following items and be prepared to talk about them to an employer if they ask.

Questions About Your Personal Self:

- What are your personal strengths?
- Why did you choose to attend college?
- List several adjectives that describe you.
- How are your verbal and written communication skills?
- Hint: Know your story

Questions About Your Academic Self:

- What skills do you have that are pertinent to the employer?
- Can you give examples from class where you have applied these skills?
- What have you gained from your classes? Did you participate in any extracurricular activities or internships?
- Why did you choose your major? Minor?
- What was your worst/favorite class? Why?

Questions About the Business:

- What is this company's business?
- Why are you interested in working here?
- What questions do you want answered about the specific department and job?

It is crucial that you practice answering standard interview questions. You can ask a friend or family member to help you, or just ask yourself the interview question and then answer it. Practicing will help you answer interview questions more smoothly.

The next few pages go over different types of interview questions including strategies for answering both standard and behavioral interview questions, ideas for questions you can ask the employer, and interview questions that may not be asked of you.

Sample Interview Questions and Strategies for Answering Them

Tell me about yourself. Talk about your experience, education, skills, and accomplishments. Keep it concise. Do not talk about your personal life.

Why do you want to work as a ...? Talk about the interesting details of the job and why they fascinate you. Show your enthusiasm for the career you have chosen.

What skills do you have? Name skills that are relevant to the job. Be able to back up each skill with an example of when you used the skill.

Tell me about your current (or last) job. Talk about the people, the variety, environment, etc. Please, do not bash your co-workers or boss!

What did you like most about your last (or current) job? Do not criticize your previous job! Talk about activities and skills that could transfer to a new job. Tell me about your education or training. Explain how these prepared you for the job.

Did you enjoy school? Why or why not? Show an interest in learning. If you only liked a few subjects, talk about how they helped you. Employers want people who will learn new skills on and off the job.

Which courses did you find the most difficult? Why? Do not blame it on the instructor! Discuss positively how you handled the class. This shows problem solving skills.

How were your grades in school? If your grades were below average, demonstrate that you still learned the material and would be able to handle the job. Be able to back this up.

Did you join any school activities? Why or why not? Activities show that you are a social person, that you enjoy being part of a group and that you work well with others. If you did not become involved, give examples of how you work well with others (ex: volunteering, working part-time or raising a family while going to school).

Have you ever been fired from a job? Why? If you have been fired, do not deny it. Explain the situation as positively as possible and focus on what you learned from this experience.

What will your manager say when you give notice that you're leaving?

Explain that you will be missed. Do not give the impression that they will be glad to be rid of you.

Give me an example of a problem you faced and how you solved it. The interviewer wants to see how you handled obstacles and decided on a solution. Think of something work or school - related.

Did you ever have a disagreement with your boss or a co-worker? If you did, find the middle ground and state how you resolved your differences.

What was your greatest failure? Admitting a failure shows maturity. Show how you learned from the situation.

What is your greatest weakness? Describe something that wouldn't be a deal-breaker for the job or is easy to overcome. Are you a poor speller? Work too many hours? Explain how you are working on overcoming this weakness.

Do you like working alone or in a group? Explain that depending on the task, you feel comfortable with either. Try to give examples from your past jobs or from school.

Who are your heroes? Think about this one. Your response tells an employer a lot about your personality and values.

What would you like to ask me? Have a prepared list of job-related questions, preferably from the research you have already done on the employer and the position for which you are applying. Do not ask about how much you will get paid, what benefits they offer, your shift, or time off. Save that for later in the process.

Take time to come up with answers to all these questions and practice answering them.

Behavioral Interview Questions and How to Answer Them

Behavioral interview questions are based on the premise that past behavior or performance predicts future performance. Past performance examples may come from work experience, activities, hobbies, or volunteer work, etc. Employers will be most impressed if your answer follows the STAR Formula!

S—Talk about a past situation

T—Talk about the task you encountered

A—Tell the specific action you took

R—Tell the result of your action

Describe a recent work-related problem and the actions you took to solve it.

Situation: Advertising revenue was down for the school newspaper and long-term advertisers were not renewing their contracts.

Task: My goal was to increase revenue.

Action: I designed a new web page and created ways our advertisers could post ads more directly to students and others who visited our site.

Result: We signed many of our former advertisers and enticed new companies by using our new format on the web.

Try to anticipate some of the behavioral questions you might be asked and be sure to use examples that show skills needed for the job.

Here are some ways you can practice for a job interview:

- Using the list above, write down your answers. Ask yourself the question, and then read your answers aloud until you feel comfortable delivering your answer.
- Then, write only the questions (not your answers!) on index cards. Go through the stack of cards and ask yourself the questions. Give your answers from memory.
- Have a friend or family member help you practice by asking you the interview questions on the cards, allowing you to answer them aloud.
- Record yourself using a phone, tablet, or computer while mock interviewing. Watch the recording when you are finished to assess your performance and improve. Pay close attention to body language.
- Schedule a mock interview with a career counselor. Email careerservices@stchas.edu.

Questions You Can Ask the Employer at an Interview

Many times, an employer will ask as part of the interview “Do you have any questions for us?” This is not the time to ask about salary, or schedules. Instead, ask questions about the job or the organization. Doing employer research before your interview will help you come up with some questions, but you can also use questions from this list.

- Will you please describe the ideal candidate for this position?
- What do you see as the key issues/problems facing the individual in this position?
- Who would be my supervisor? How will I be evaluated?
- What does the company value most in an employee?
- How would you describe your management style?
- Is there a career progression for someone hired into this position?
- If you could go back in time when you began working for this company, what advice would you give yourself?
- What is the one thing I could do in the first three months of employment to make a positive impact on the organization?
- What do YOU like best about working here?
- What did the previous person in this position do that you would like to see continued? What would you like to see done differently?
- What type of person succeeds here?
- What characteristics, in your experience, have distinguished top performers from their peers?
- What are the next steps in the hiring process? When might I hear from you about the position? (if nothing else, always ask this)

Choose three or four questions to ask at your next interview, either from your research or the list above. Have them written or printed out so you can refer to them during this part of the interview. It’s okay to make some notes about the employer’s responses as well.

Illegal Interview Questions

It is unlikely a reputable interviewer will ask you any of these questions, but you should be aware of them just in case.

Types of Interviews

There are lots of ways to conduct an interview so it's a good idea to be familiar with the most common methods. Think about what skills you might need to succeed in each interview format. Common types include in-person, phone, recorded or video interviews.

In Person Interviews

Be sure you get the address of your interview location and do a dry run a day or so before your interview. Don't think that you can just leave a little early for your interview and it will work out. There may be road work, or a closed exit. The parking lot might be under construction. You may have to park farther away from where your interview is located or need cash for a parking garage. You may need to go through a checkpoint or have to walk a long way to your interview location.

Be sure you take copies of your resume and references, along with a list of questions to ask during your interview.

As with all interviews, be sure that you are dressed professionally, and have a neat and well-groomed appearance. Check everything you plan to wear a few days before your interview in case any of it needs to be cleaned, repaired, or ironed. Pay attention to your shoes and polish them if needed.

Arrive a little early for your interview. Leave your cell phone and other devices in the car. Do not bring pets or children. Don't smoke or wear heavy cologne or perfume. Do not bring food or drink into an interview location.

Be courteous to anyone you meet on the premises, from the receptionist to the janitor, if you meet them. Frequently, interviewers check in with other staff who interacted with the job candidate.

During your interview, shake hands when you greet your interviewer. Smile! Make good eye contact. Show that you have a pleasant, flexible outlook and excellent listening and communication skills.

How will your resume, behavior, and conversation with the employer prove to them that you have these qualities? Show energy and enthusiasm. Thank the interviewer for their time at the end of the interview. Remember to ask each person who interviewed you for a business card so that you have their contact information. If they don't have business cards, ask them to write down this information.

Be sure you send a thank you letter or email after the interview!

Phone Interviews

Companies frequently decide to interview candidates over the phone as a first step in the screening process. Use these helpful tips to make your phone interview impressive and increase your success.

Be ready to talk

- If the interviewer has called without notice, ask to call the person back. This gives you time to gather your thoughts and your materials.
- Have your resume, calendar, and paper and pen ready.
- Limit distractions. Go to a quiet place without computer, TV, other phones, etc. Do not answer other calls while on the phone with the interviewer.
- Never talk and eat or chew gum at the same time.
- Sit or stand up, be alert and smile. Your personality will come through the phone even though the interviewer cannot see you.

Listen Carefully

- Take note of the interviewer's name. Ask the person to repeat it if necessary.
- If you are able, write out the interviewer's questions. This will keep you focused.
- If you don't understand a question, ask the interviewer to repeat it.

Provide Brief, Thoughtful Answers:

- Give short, to the point answers that demonstrate how your qualifications and experience fit the job.
- What activities in the past can you share that demonstrate your ability to do this job?
- Think STAR Formula when you answer! What was the situation? What was the task to be done? What action did you take? What was the result?

Ask Your Own Questions:

- Ask specifics about the duties and responsibilities of the job.
- Ask about the company or the department.
- Ask about next steps in the interviewing process.

Do not forget: Send a thank you letter or email after a phone interview, just as you would for an in-person interview.

Video Interviews

More and more employers are using video interviews in their hiring process. A video interview is a little bit like being on television. You should always have your camera on for a video interview. It is okay to mute your microphone when you are not speaking, but remember to turn it back on to answer questions! You should be in a work-appropriate location, and you should be fully dressed in neat, professional attire. Sit up in an attentive, professional posture.

Pre-interview checklist:

- Have a stable internet connection, headset with microphone, web cam and wired (rather than wireless) computer connection.
- Test your equipment beforehand and install needed software updates.
- Set up an appropriate background behind yourself and the camera.
- Verify the web camera height is at eye-level and about an arm's length away.
- When looking at the camera, your eyes should be two-thirds of the way from bottom of frame.
- Minimize interruptions (phone off, dog outside, childcare, etc.).
- Dress in clean professional clothing in neutral colors and patterns.
- Ensure you have a neat appearance.
- Look directly at the camera, sitting centered on the device.
- Sit reasonably still during the interview.
- Speak at a reasonable speed, not rushing.

Take time to research the company, and have questions prepared for them as well. At the end of your video interview, thank your interviewer for his or her time and for considering your application.

After your interview, remember to send a follow up thank you email to your interviewer!

Recorded Interviews

More recently, employers have started using recorded interviews in their hiring process. Usually, recorded interviews are done through an application. The application asks you a series of questions. You are able to read these questions before you record your response. Most employers will allow you to watch and re-record your answers if you decide you want to try answering the questions again. Before recording, make sure that you are in a work-appropriate location, and that you are fully dressed in neat, professional attire. Sit up in an attentive, professional posture.

Pre-interview checklist:

- Have a stable internet connection, headset with microphone, web cam and wired (rather than wireless) computer connection.
- Test your equipment beforehand and install needed software updates.
- Set up an appropriate background behind yourself and the camera.
- Verify the web camera height is at eye-level and about an arm's length away.
- When looking at the camera, your eyes should be two-thirds of the way from bottom of frame.
- Minimize interruptions (phone off, dog outside, childcare, etc.).
- Dress in clean professional clothing in neutral colors and patterns.
- Ensure you have a neat appearance.
- Look directly at the camera, sitting centered on the device.
- Sit reasonably still during the interview.
- Speak at a reasonable speed, not rushing.
- Check to see if you have the opportunity to re-record your answers and/or if there are time limits. this will help you plan accordingly.

Take time to research the company, and have questions prepared for them as well if they ask. At the end of your recorded interview, submit your answers.

After your interview, remember to send a follow up thank you email to your interviewer if possible.

Thank You Letters

You should always send a thank you letter after an interview.

Sending a thank you letter not only shows that you are polite, but also demonstrates continued interest on your part and keeps your name and credentials in the mind of your potential employer.

The letter gives you the opportunity to state, once again, a summary of your qualifications, why you are interested in this position, and why you should be the candidate hired.

It is very important to address the letter directly to the person who interviewed you, so make sure you ask for their business card at the end of the interview. That way, you will have their name, title, and mailing address.

If you had a phone or video interview, you can either ask for the interviewer's information at the end of the interview or check the company website.

Use the same font and font size on the thank you letter or email that you used for your resume and references list.

Ideally, send your letter within two days after your in-person, phone, or video interview. Since the U.S. Mail may take longer, you may prefer to email a thank you letter. If so, make sure that you still compose it in a professional letter format.

See the next two pages for examples of cover letters.

Morgan Smith, Manager
First Sign Shop
380 Chestnut Hill Road
St. Charles, Missouri 63304

Dear Morgan Smith:

I enjoyed meeting with you last Tuesday and finding out more about the First Sign Shop and the position of graphic designer.

As I mentioned during the interview, I feel very confident in designing brochures, as well as signs. I have enclosed two brochure samples that I designed as school projects. Please feel free to review the slide show presentation I prepared for the ABC Company. The owner has given me permission to pass along their web page where the slide show is located. It is www.abccompany.com.

I am very interested in this position and believe I could be a productive and energetic addition to your staff. I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Dress and Dine For Success

Types of Professional Attire

“Interviewers take less than five minutes to make a hiring decision. They spend the rest of the interview confirming their hunch.” –Dr. Jan McCormick, Founder and CEO of FullCircle Career Services, LLC.

Do not let a bad impression keep you from your dream job—dress for success and to impress! Some workplaces allow employees to wear business casual for everyday wear, but for an interview, business professional is probably best.

Look at pictures from the company’s website and social media to see how employees dress and pay attention to how people are dressed on the day of your interview. Gauge if the types of companies you will talk to would prefer not to see facial piercings or tattoos and choose attire accordingly.

Business Professional

- Business professional clothes should be solid, dark, or neutral
- Light colors can be worn underneath.
- No stripes or bright prints or colors.
- Shoes should be closed-toed heel or dress shoes
- Suit jacket and pants/skirt should be matching colors.

Business Casual

- Business casual clothes can feature more colors and styles including nice pants/slacks, skirts and/or dresses.
- Skirts and dresses should be knee length when standing and thighs should be covered while seated.
- Jacket and tie are optional. Blazers and cardigans acceptable.
- Flats, boots, closed toe shoes or comfortable shoes for walking are acceptable.
- No jeans, miniskirts, shorts, sundresses, apparel with marketing messages or athletic wear

Work clothing should always be in good condition, not too large or small, tailored, wrinkle and lint free. When in doubt, neutral colors such as black, grey, navy, blue, brown, beige, or taupe are good options. Hair should be clean and neatly styled. Nails and makeup (if worn) should be natural in style. Personal fragrance should be mild, and you should avoid using hygiene products with strong scents. Any jewelry should be moderate. Belts should match the color of your shoes and attire.

Do you have attire appropriate for a career related event such as an interview, job fair, or networking opportunity? Evaluate your shirts/blouses, trousers/slacks, skirts/dresses, or suits. Inspect belts, shoes, briefcases/attaches/handbags. Go through ties, scarves, and other accessories. Do not forget to scrutinize belts and shoes. Items need to be clean, neat, and in good repair. They should fit well—not too baggy, not too tight.

You should have at least two work appropriate outfits for interviews during your job search process. This is because some employers have two interviews before making a hiring decision and you should wear a different outfit to the second interview.

What you wear to work daily depends on your job, and on your employer. They will set the tone for what constitutes appropriate attire for their workplace. Adjust your daily work wear accordingly.

If you do not have work appropriate attire, please let us know so we can help. Career Services has a FREE Career Closet for currently enrolled students. It is filled with business professional and business casual attire. We have suits, separates, ties, scarves, belts, handbags, shoes, and accessories. We want you to look your best!

Meal-Based Interviews

Sometimes employers conduct job interviews over a cup of coffee, or even a meal such as lunch or dinner. This can occur in a dining room that is part of the organization itself, or at a restaurant. At other times, employers conduct meetings in similar situations, so even if you are not interviewing, it is important that you know how to conduct yourself professionally while eating or drinking. Good table manners are important!

Employers use these types of interviews to understand how you might respond when you are under pressure, or in an unfamiliar situation.

Keep in mind that even though you may be in a coffee shop, café, or restaurant, it is still an interview so all the things you've learned before still apply. Research the location beforehand so you know how to get there. Take time to check out the menu.

Arrive on time and dressed professionally, shake hands, make good eye contact, and smile. Turn off your mobile device. Follow your host's lead. Demonstrate good manners—eat and drink neatly and quietly, no body noises, no smoking, and no alcohol.

Order easy to manage foods that you know you can eat neatly while engaging in conversation. Nothing messy and nothing that requires a great deal of cutting. Do not order expensive items; keep your order well below what your host orders.

Put a napkin in your lap. Chew with your mouth closed, and swallow before speaking. Sit up straight, keep your elbows off the table and eat as quietly and neatly as you can. Ask for items to be passed to you if you need something. If someone asks you to pass the salt, pass the salt and pepper together.

Remember: you are not really there for the food. You are there for an interview. Stay focused.

Thank your hosts for the meal, and for the interview. Be sure to send a thank you for the interview afterwards!

If you have questions about dining etiquette, email us at careerservices@stchas.edu. We have additional materials we can provide to you.

Competencies

Consider Your Soft Skills

Soft skills (or career competencies) are important to employers and in the workplace. These are skills related to getting along with others, communicating well, paying attention to, and understanding social cues and more. In your interview, through your resume, and when speaking to your references, employers will be looking for these qualities. Demonstrate that you can bring these skills and abilities to the organization and the job will be closer to being yours!

The National Association of Colleges and Employers (NACE) has identified eight career readiness competencies, or sets of core skills, each of which can be demonstrated in a variety of ways. Developing career competencies can prepare you for success in the workplace and will help you with lifelong career management. The NACE Career Competencies, their definitions, and examples of sample behaviors are listed below.

Challenge yourself to work on these competencies as you develop yourself professionally.

The NACE Career Competencies

Career and Self-Development: This means to proactively develop oneself and one's career through continual personal and professional learning, awareness of one's strengths and weaknesses, navigation of career opportunities, and networking to build relationships within and without one's organization.

Examples of Career and Self-Development Competencies:

- Show an awareness of own strengths and areas for development.
- Identify areas for continual growth while pursuing and applying feedback.
- Develop plans and goals for one's future career.
- Professionally advocate for oneself and others.
- Display curiosity: seek out opportunities to learn.
- Assume duties or positions that will help one progress professionally.
- Establish, maintain, and/or leverage relationships with people who can help one professionally.
- Seek and embrace development opportunities.
- Voluntarily participate in further education, training, or other events to support one's career.

Communication: Clearly and effectively exchange information, ideas, facts, and perspectives with persons inside and outside of an organization.

Examples of Communication Competencies:

- Understand the importance of and demonstrate verbal, written, and non-verbal/body language, abilities.
- Employ active listening, persuasion, and influencing skills.
- Communicate in a clear and organized manner so that others can effectively understand.
- Frame communication with respect to diversity of learning styles, varied individual communication abilities, and cultural differences.
- Ask appropriate questions for specific information from supervisors, specialists, and others.
- Promptly inform relevant others when needing guidance with assigned tasks.

Critical Thinking: Identify and respond to needs based upon an understanding of situational context and logical analysis of relevant information.

Examples of Critical Thinking Competencies:

- Make decisions and solve problems using sound, inclusive reasoning, and judgment.
- Gather and analyze information from a diverse set of sources and individuals to fully understand a problem.
- Proactively anticipate needs and prioritize action steps.
- Accurately summarize and interpret data with an awareness of personal biases that may impact outcomes.
- Effectively communicate actions and rationale, recognizing the diverse perspectives and lived experiences of stakeholders.
- Multi-task well in a fast-paced environment.

Equity & Inclusion: Demonstrate the awareness, attitude, knowledge, and skills required to equitably engage and include people from different local and global cultures. Engage in anti-racist practices that actively challenge the systems, structures, and policies of racism.

Examples of Equity & Inclusion Competencies:

- Solicit and use feedback from multiple cultural perspectives to make inclusive and equity-minded decisions.
- Actively contribute to inclusive and equitable practices that influence individual and systemic change.
- Advocate for inclusion, equitable practices, justice, and empowerment for historically marginalized communities.
- Seek global cross-cultural interactions and experiences that enhance one’s understanding of people from different demographic groups and that leads to personal growth.
- Keep an open mind to diverse ideas and new ways of thinking.
- Identify resources and eliminate barriers resulting from individual and systemic racism, inequities, and biases.
- Demonstrate flexibility by adapting to diverse environments.
- Address systems of privilege that limit opportunities for members of historically marginalized communities.

Professionalism: Knowing work environments differ greatly, understand, and demonstrate effective work habits, and act in the interest of the larger community and workplace.

Examples of Professionalism Competencies:

- Act equitably with integrity and accountability to self, others, and the organization.
- Maintain a positive personal brand in alignment with organization and personal career values.
- Be present and prepared.
- Demonstrate dependability (e.g., report consistently for work or meetings).
- Prioritize and complete tasks to accomplish organizational goals.
- Consistently meet or exceed goals and expectations.
- Have an attention to detail, resulting in few if any errors in their work.
- Show a high level of dedication toward doing a good job.

Leadership: Recognize and capitalize on personal and team strengths to achieve organizational goals.

Examples of Leadership Competencies:

- Inspire, persuade, and motivate self and others under a shared vision.
- Seek out and leverage diverse resources and feedback from others to inform direction.
- Use innovative thinking to go beyond traditional methods.
- Serve as a role model to others by approaching tasks with confidence and a positive attitude.
- Motivate and inspire others by encouraging them and by building mutual trust.
- Plan, initiate, manage, complete, and evaluate projects.

Teamwork: Build and maintain collaborative relationships to work effectively toward common goals, while appreciating diverse viewpoints and shared responsibilities.

Examples of Teamwork Competencies:

- Listen carefully to others, taking time to understand and ask appropriate questions without interrupting.
- Effectively manage conflict, interact with, and respect diverse personalities, and meet ambiguity with resilience.
- Be accountable for individual and team responsibilities and deliverables.
- Employ personal strengths, knowledge, and talents to complement those of others.
- Exercise the ability to compromise and be agile.
- Collaborate with others to achieve common goals.
- Build strong, positive working relationships with supervisor and team members/coworkers.

Technology: Understand and leverage technologies ethically to enhance efficiencies, complete tasks, and accomplish goals.

Examples of Technology Competencies:

- Navigate change and be open to learning new technologies.
- Use technology to improve efficiency and productivity of their work.
- Identify appropriate technology for completing specific tasks.
- Manage technology to integrate information to support relevant, effective, and timely decision-making.
- Quickly adapt to new or unfamiliar technologies.
- Manipulate information, construct ideas, and use technology to achieve strategic goals.

List five career competencies you already possess:

Developing Relevant Experiences

“Nearly all of the employers taking part in the National Association of Colleges and Employers’ (NACE) Job Outlook 2015 survey said they prefer to hire job candidates who have work experience. Relevant work experience is preferred by almost 75 percent of employers. On the other side, fewer than five percent of employers said experience didn’t factor into their decision when hiring new college graduates. Six in ten employers say they prefer work experience gained through an internship or co-op experience.”

Students often say, “I need experience to get a job, but I need the job to get the experience!” There are ways to gain relevant experience in your field of interest, and it will help you obtain work in your field. You can get experience through student clubs, community organizations, student membership in professional organizations, internships, part-time jobs, and volunteering.

Check out student clubs at your school and join the ones that are related to your field of interest. Consider helping with projects, fundraisers, and events, or even serve as an officer. This can be put on your resume.

You should also investigate community organizations in your area related to your intended career and participate. This can also be put on your resume.

A student membership in a professional organization can offer scholarships, internship, webinars, conferences, and more.

You should also investigate internships, part-time jobs related to your field, and the possibility of volunteer activities doing work related to your intended career.

Internships

Internships and cooperative education experiences improve your ability to get a job after graduation. Internships help you to gain relevant work experience that you can include on your resume. They also help you develop a variety of occupational and job-seeking skills, make valuable connections with professionals in your field, and explore and clarify career options. Practical experience is critical.

To take your first step to learn more about internships, schedule an appointment with a career counselor at careerservices@stchas.edu. We can explain the process, help you draft/update your resume, practice interviewing skills, and guide you as you seek work experience.

How to Find Internships

Register on Handshake, SCC's online job and internship board. Go to stchas.joinhandshake.com. Check the site often as new jobs and internships are posted daily. Filter by location and "internship."

Tap into professional organizations for contacts. Professional associations are committed to helping train and socialize people in a specific profession or trade. Find the ones that apply to your career. If you need help identifying these, talk to a career counselor.

Call companies in the community that might hire interns in your chosen career field. This proactive approach may be just what the organization is wanting in potential employees.

Check websites of employers in the community that may hire workers with the skills you are developing in your college coursework. Apply to entry-level positions in your field of interest. Even if not directly posted as an "internship" a part-time job in your field will be just as valuable.

Build an account on LinkedIn. Then connect with co-workers, instructors, and other professionals in your field of interest. LinkedIn is the site for professional networking, and you will be surprised how many connections you can make, thus leading to internship opportunities or leads about opportunities.

Ask faculty members or the academic department chairperson of your major or field of interest if they know of any opportunities available.

Look at internship sites such as: <https://www.youtern.com/> and www.internjobs.com.

TIP: Get a written job description for your internships or co-op and save it because you can use that job description to describe the internship on your resume.

Volunteering

Volunteering improves your ability to get a job after graduation. Volunteering can help you gain relevant work experience to include on your resume, develop and utilize a variety of occupational skills, make valuable contacts with professionals in your field and explore and clarify career options.

How to Find Volunteering Opportunities

Call companies in the community that might need volunteers in your chosen career field. This proactive approach may be just what the organization is wanting in potential employees.

Check websites of volunteer organizations in the community that may need volunteers with the skills you are developing in your college coursework.

Ask faculty members or the academic department chairperson of your major or field of interest if they know of any opportunities available.

Consider local volunteer organizations such as:

St. Louis Area Foodbank:

Professionalism

Professionalism is behaving with the competence expected of a professional, rather than an amateur. This can include being reliable and punctual, knowing your area of expertise well, being ethical and honest, supporting co-workers, and trying hard to promote your profession in a positive light.

You can demonstrate professionalism in your job search and on the job itself. Let's talk about some areas where you can develop professionalism in your job search. These areas include salary negotiation, accepting or rejecting a job offer, being professional on the job, professional development, and giving notice when you are ready to move on to another opportunity.

Salary Negotiation

So, you've conducted a job search, researched jobs, and employers, submitted high quality application materials for a job, gotten the interview, and aced it. The employer has called you back to make you an offer. If you've done your homework, you should already have an idea what a fair rate of pay is for the position. Suppose the employer comes back much lower than you expected, and much lower than your research suggested? It's time to negotiate.

When an offer is made, and the salary is below your expectations:

Restate your interest and enthusiasm over the position:

- Highlight any special abilities or skills you offer that are above what an “average” employee may have.
- Cite the research you have done about the salaries for this type of work.
- Give a range of your salary expectations ($40,000 to $45,000 per year, or $19.00 an hour etc.)

If salary is not negotiable, reiterate your interest and enthusiasm and ask:

- How might you quickly contribute to the organization to make this position more valuable?
- If your salary could be reviewed after three months.
- About any benefits that come with the job and if any could be adjusted to help meet your needs (work from home at times? Flex time? Additional vacation?).

Always be polite and positive throughout the negotiation process. Give yourself 24 hours to think about your final decision.

How to Accept a Job Offer

Congratulations! Your job search was a success, and the employer has made an offer you find acceptable.

Now you need to formally accept their offer. Many employers will send you a formal offer letter, so you have the terms of your employment in writing. You should save this to your job search file. You will respond to the job offer in writing, to confirm the details and your start date.

If the offer was made verbally, take careful notes during the conversation to be sure you understand all the terms including your pay, any benefits such as insurance, and details about paid time off.

You can accept the offer using U.S. Mail, or email. In many cases, email is more efficient. Create your U.S. Mail acceptance letter using the business letter format used earlier in this guide; format your email acceptance letter using the business email format used earlier in this guide. You would use address and date information in a mailed letter, and a subject heading in an emailed letter.

Be sure you express your gratitude for the opportunity! Here's an example of what you might say in the body such a letter or email:

Sample Job Offer Letter:

Dear _____,

Thank you for your phone call. I am delighted to accept the position of Graphic Artist at First Sign Shop. I am very excited about this opportunity. I'm eager to contribute to the company and to work with everyone on the First Sign Shop team.

As discussed, I understand that my annual salary will be $48,000 with health and life insurance benefits provided after I completed my 30-day probationary period.

I look forward to starting employment on February 1st, 2024.

If there is any additional information or paperwork I need to provide before then, please let me know.

Thank you very much!

Sincerely,

FirstName LastName

How to Reject a Job Offer

Sometimes, after interviewing, the job didn't turn out to be what you thought it was and it's just not a good fit. Other times, the salary comes in too low, and they won't negotiate. In these cases, you may have to reject (or decline) a job offer. Do this with care because you don't want to burn any professional bridges.

The employer may reach out to you later and offer you the job on more acceptable terms. Or you may find another position with the same employer that you like better. Also, people do change jobs, so the person who interviewed you, or who delivered the company's offer to you, may move on to another employer. Make sure they remember you as a courteous, professional person. Be polite, express gratitude for the opportunity, and express regret that you must decline.

If you like the organization, but decided the opportunity wasn't a good fit, it's fine to say so. If you liked the organization and the job, but the salary wasn't what you were hoping to see, simply state that you must decline due to the salary.

You can decline an offer using U.S. Mail, or email. In most cases, email is more efficient. Whichever you use, format them as demonstrated earlier in this guide, using address information in a mailed letter, and a subject heading in an email.

Sample Decline Letter for Poor Fit:

Dear _____,

Thank you for offering me the opportunity to work at First Sign Shop. Unfortunately, I will not be accepting the position as it doesn't fit my career goals.

Many thanks for the offer. I regret being unable to accept and am sorry it didn't work out. I'm confident you'll find someone wonderful to fill the position.

Sincerely,

Firstname Lastname

Sample Decline Letter for Low Salary:

Dear _____,

Thank you for offering me the position of Graphic Artist at First Sign Shop, and for considering my salary counteroffer. I do understand that budgets are tight but must decline the position at the current compensation.

Once again, thank you for your courtesy during the negotiation process. I wish you and First Sign Shop the best.

Sincerely,

Firstname Lastname

How to Give Notice at a Job

There are a lot of reasons to quit a job. Frequently, it's because you've conducted a successful job search and have gotten a job offer for a better one!

When you are ready to leave a job, it's important to do so professionally. We all know it's important to make a good first impression...but it's also very important to leave a good lasting impression as well. Consider carefully what you will do if your current employer makes a counteroffer, and whether that could impact your decision to leave.

First, check your employee handbook, or your employment contract to be sure you understand what to expect.

Some employers have a policy that when someone gives notice, they are asked to leave immediately. If you discover this is the case with your employer, you'll want to have your personal belongings (discretely) packed up and out of your workspace before you give notice. Try to have projects wrapped up so you don't leave loose ends.

Be sure you've sent LinkedIn connections requests to colleagues and other work contacts, so you don't lose touch. Gather important documents or contact information. Download any information you may need to a flash drive or email it to yourself at a personal email address. Of course, you shouldn't take anything that doesn't belong to you, or you should not possess. Be aware that as soon as you give notice, your email address, your voice mail, and your computer access may be revoked immediately.

Depending on the type of work you do, you may also be subject to a non-compete or non-disclosure clause. Check with an attorney if you need to do so.

Once you are ready, if you can, it's best to deliver this news in person, to your immediate supervisor. Keep it simple and courteous. All that's necessary is to tell your boss you've appreciated the chance to work there, and have enjoyed your tasks, but that you've found another opportunity that interests you, and you're going to be moving on, with a departure date two weeks from the date of your conversation. Of course, the exact amount of time may depend on your job, your organization, and HR's policies.

It's a good idea to follow up with a written resignation letter. Keep it concise and professional.

After that, be as helpful as you can to assist with a smooth transition. Stay positive and do not bash your current job, even at your going away party, if you have one. Leaving a good impression means that your network will still hold you in high regard, and this can only help you in the long run.

The job search process can feel overwhelming, so it's helpful to break it into smaller, more manageable steps. The good news is you don't have to do every step in order. For example, you can start working on your resume before you identify what you want to do. Just start checking off as many of these activities as you can, and you'll find yourself well on the way to a great opportunity.

Reflecting on Your Interests Checklist

- I have identified my personal strengths, skills, interests, and values.
- I have made a list of possible job titles/fields of interest.
- I can name two or three careers/jobs I plan to pursue.

Identifying and Researching Jobs and Employers of Interest Checklist

- I have researched organizations or companies that might hire someone with my skills, interests, and background.
- I have researched potential career fields: typical entry-level jobs, typical salaries, best geographic location for jobs, etc.
- I have identified the top three geographic areas where I'd like to live and work.
- I have identified potential employers for the type of work I'm seeking.
- I have researched salaries and the value of benefits to set reasonable salary expectations.

Building A Job Search File Checklist

- I have a system for keeping track of my contacts, interviews, and other job search activities.
- I have collected contact information for employers of interest.

Technology Considerations Checklist

- I have a neutral/professional email address to give to employers, to use on my resume, and to create profiles on job search and networking sites.
- I have a personalized and professional voice mail message on my phone and cell phone. I delete old messages to ensure my voicemail box is empty.
- I have searched my name on the internet to ensure that I have an online presence and that it is business appropriate.
- I have reviewed my profile(s) on social networking sites such as Facebook and made sure there is nothing on my profile that a potential employer would question.
- I have registered with Handshake, SCC's free online job board:
stchas.joinhandshake.com

Networking Checklist

- I have developed a list of potential networking contacts and keep in touch with them.
- I have developed my “one minute sales pitch” for short encounters with employers.
- I’ve analyzed some networking scripts and have developed some of my own.
- I have developed a professional profile on LinkedIn.com.
- I collected the business cards of every person who has interviewed me, or has helped me in my job search, when possible. When a business card is not available, I had each person write down their contact information.
- I sent thank you letters or emails to every person who interviewed me or has helped me in my job search.

Resume, References, and Cover Letter Checklist

- I have developed a resume, cover letter, and list of references.
- I have had my resume and cover letter(s) reviewed by an career counselor. Email us at careerservices@stchas.edu to schedule a resume critique.
- I have identified at least three individuals who will serve as professional references.
- I have prepared a portfolio or work samples to highlight my experience, skills, and talent.
- I follow up on every interesting job lead immediately.
- I keep a copy of my resume next to my phone in case I receive a call from an employer (I also have an electronic or cloud-based version of my resume that I can quickly email to any networking contacts or job leads).
- I periodically update my resume while job hunting.

Interview Preparation Checklist

- I have analyzed my education and developed my “story” for employers.
- I have developed answers to typical interview questions, have practiced answering them, and have recorded myself to study body language to improve performance.
- I have a list of questions to ask employers at interviews.
- I have completed a mock interview with a career counselor. Email us at careerservices@stchas.edu to schedule one.
- I have interview attire that is appropriate for the field in which I plan to work. Feel free to use the SCC Career Closet if needed.
