The Academic Tradition

The robes worn by participants in commencement exercises have a history dating from the 12th and 13th centuries. Each scholar wears a cap, gown and, perhaps, a hood that designates his or her highest degree and the institution that granted it.

Although the most common cap is the square mortarboard, six or eight-sided tams are worn at some universities. The tassel, after a degree has been conferred, is worn over the front quarter of the cap. The tassel of a doctor is gold, whereas the tassel of a master, bachelor or associate is usually black, but can also take on the college's official colors.

The style of the gown signifies the highest degree held by the wearer. The gown is usually black, but some institutions provide gowns in their college colors. The doctor's gown is silk with velvet trim on the front and on the bell-shaped sleeves. The master's gown lacks the velvet trim and has very long, oblong sleeves that are closed at the end.

The forearms protrude through slits near the elbow of the master's gown. Bachelor's and associate's gowns have straight or pointed sleeves that open at their ends.

A hood is usually worn by doctors and masters. The hood is worn around the neck over the shoulders, draped down the back. The official colors of the institution that conferred the degree are used in the lining of the hood. The velvet edging of the hood indicates the degree. White is for arts and letters, light blue is for education, pink for music, dark blue for philosophy, gold or yellow for science, copper for business administration and brown for fine arts.

A stole, ribbon, cord or other ornament worn with the gown usually symbolizes a special honor bestowed on the wearer. Students who graduate from St. Charles Community College with "Cum Laude," "Magna Cum Laude," or "Summa Cum Laude" wear a gold cord over the shoulder and a gold mortarboard tassel with the academic gown. Members of Phi Theta Kappa, the national academic honor society for community college students, wear a golden stole that honors their scholarly achievement. Student clubs and organizations may provide honor cords to their graduates who have achieved certain milestones that are meaningful to the individual club or organization.

Distinguished Alumni

St. Charles Community College is proud to recognize Dr. Christina Cox as a 2026 Distinguished Alumni—an honor that reflects both her professional excellence and her deep, enduring commitment to student success.

Dr. Cox's journey with SCC began as a first-generation college student, stepping onto campus with ambition, determination, and a desire to build a better future. That experience would not only shape her academic path but ultimately define her career. Today, she serves as SCC's Executive Director of Institutional Research & Effectiveness, helping guide the institution through data-informed decision-making that directly impacts student outcomes.

Her career in institutional research began at SCC in 2015 as Associate Director, where she quickly developed a reputation for thoughtful analysis and a collaborative approach. She later expanded her experience at the University of Missouri—St. Louis as a Research Consultant before returning to SCC in 2021 to lead the Institutional Research department—drawn back by a strong belief in the transformative power of community colleges.

In her leadership role, Dr. Cox has championed data governance, process improvement, and innovative approaches to making data more accessible and actionable. She understands that behind every data point is a student story, and she is driven to ensure that information is used not just to measure success, but to create it.

Beyond campus, Dr. Cox is a respected leader in her field, serving as President of the Mid-American Association of Institutional Research

Board of Directors. She is a dedicated advocate for professional development, collaboration, and knowledge-sharing—values that continue to strengthen both her institution and the broader research community.

Dr. Christina Cox's story is one of purpose, perseverance, and giving back. From first-generation student to institutional leader, she embodies the mission of St. Charles Community College and the powerful impact of education.
