Prologue

BARBARA R. KAVALIER, PH.D.

SCC President

Community colleges have helped reshape the history of higher education in America with their unique open-door mission that offers the promise of a better life for all students.

At St. Charles Community College, we have positively and profoundly shaped the lives of countless students for 30 years. And our story is just beginning: Each year our pages are filled with examples of collaboration and connection, of innovation and inspiration.

The 2016-17 academic year is no exception. I invite you to read St. Charles Community College's Annual Report and to learn about our accomplishments as we write our story together.

Meeting the needs of business and industry together

WORKFORCE
PARTNERSHIP
STIMULATE ECONOMY

SCC drives the local economic engine through new Science, Technology, Engineering and Math (STEM) workforce partnerships and program offerings.

With more than 65 business partnerships, SCC prides itself on meeting the needs of the community's business and industry.

"It can be difficult to recruit employees with the skill sets we need already in place," said Heather Schneider, training and communication coordinator at RK Stratman. "Fortunately, we have been partners with SCC for more than 15 years now. This partnership has allowed us to invest in manufacturing-targeted training."

The college approved the development of a Supply Chain Logistics and Manufacturing Associate of Applied Science degree program in June 2017 to further meet the demands of the local workforce.

"Employers are clamoring for more technical programs that afford students not just a degree but a national credential, such as the Manufacturing Skills Standards Council credential," said Fay Aubuchon, associate dean of workforce programs and services. "Employers appreciate the opportunity to team up with SCC's instructors to roll out classes that are meaningful in the wake of a skills shortage."

Business
PARTNERSHIPS

SCC AND OPO AID LOCAL ENTREPRENEURISM

SCC and OPO Startups joined forces to give SCC students and alumni free access to the co-working center, whose mission is to promote and grow the regional digital startup community in St. Charles.

"In the spirit of collaboration and networking, giving our students and alumni the ability to connect with these entrepreneurs and experts in a common space is truly invaluable to our community," said Lauren Dickens, SCC dean of business, science, education, math and computer science.

A driving force

SCC JOINS NETWORK TO TAKE ON TOP ISSUE FACING MISSOURI BUSINESSES

SCC joined all 12 of Missouri's community colleges in establishing the Missouri Community College Workforce Development Network in March to address a longstanding challenge facing Missouri businesses – the availability of a skilled workforce.

TODD RICHARDSON

Missouri Speaker of the House

"I want people to understand what an extraordinary agreement this is," said Todd Richardson, Missouri Speaker of the House. "If you look at the economic development activity that happens in our state, community colleges are an essential component of the state's economic engine, and this agreement today is only going to improve their ability to serve the needs of the state and help us develop the type of trained, educated workforce that today's employers need."

The most significant change resulting from the creation of the network is that through their local community college, businesses will have access to resources at every college in the state.

Previously, procedural and geographic barriers prevented colleges from working outside of their mandated service areas. This meant that if a business approached a college with a specific training need, but that college didn't have expertise in that field, then the business may not have been able to get the workforce training its employees needed.

"This change will allow us to better focus on meeting the needs of businesses and industries at no additional cost to the state," said Barbara Kavalier, Ph.D., SCC president. "Together, we will leave no stone unturned when serving businesses and students in the state of Missouri."

"By breaking down these barriers and drawing upon our collective resources, each college is going to be able to play to its strengths," said Rob Dixon, Missouri Community College Association past-president and CEO.

"Together, we will leave no stone unturned when serving businesses and students in the state of Missouri."

GOVERNOR ERIC GREITENS SIGNS RIDESHARING BILL AT SCC

SCC welcomed Missouri Governor Eric Greitens on April 24 to sign House Bill 130. The new law established state-wide regulation making it possible for ridesharing services to operate in Missouri. "Ridesharing companies like Lyft and Uber represent opportunity for thousands of Missourians who are looking to work," Greitens said. "Innovation is key to Missouri's future," he continued, hitting on something SCC finds to be true in higher education as well. In addition to legislators and SCC leadership, the Governor was flanked by members of SCC's Student Veterans Organization in support of Uber's platform of hiring returning veterans as drivers for the ridesharing company. "We were honored to welcome Gov. Eric Greitens of the great state of Missouri to the beautiful SCC campus," said Barbara Kavalier, Ph.D., SCC president.

Making history

SCC LOOKS TO THE FUTURE WITH PURCHASE OF NEW SITE

SCC made history in February when the college closed on the purchase of the building at One Academy Place in Dardenne Prairie. The property became the college's first satellite location it owns, and its vision is to expand nursing and allied health offerings and develop additional health- and sustainability-centered programming.

This innovative center will expand access to higher education and professional and career development for students, businesses and the community. Potential programs for the site are being selected strategically to help fill a need in the workforce both nationally and locally.

The 69,000-square-foot building was purchased by Lindenwood University in September 2012, and SCC leased approximately 26,000 square feet of the building's space for its Nursing and Allied Health Program under terms of the college's partnership agreement from 2012-2017.

The SCC Board of Trustees approved the purchase contract on the building at their Dec. 5, 2016, meeting, and SCC finalized the purchase of the property for $9.45 million on Feb. 24, 2017.

"With this site, we will have the opportunity to offer more stackable credits," said Amy Koehler, campus dean/dean of nursing and allied health. "We want to be able to meet students wherever they are in their educational journey or career."

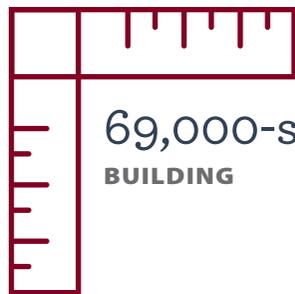

A building rename will be announced prior to a space dedication in the coming year. "At the same time SCC is gaining square-footage, students are gaining additional opportunities to reach their educational goals," said SCC President Barbara Kavalier, Ph.D.

Options increase

SCC puts students in the driver's seat, giving them options when it comes to how they choose to engage with the college.

The number of students nationally enrolled in at least one distance learning course tops out near 6 million annually, the most recent year in which full data is available, and 12.5 percent of those students took online courses exclusively, according to the National Center for Education Statistics.

ONLINE

“The shift to online learning is due to access, flexibility, affordability and efficiency.”

Chad Shepherd
Chief Information Officer

Although the college has offered bits and pieces of a distance learning program in the past, SCC launched its first fully online degree and certificate programs in fall. Students can now earn an associate of arts degree entirely online as well as numerous other degrees and certificates.

“The shift to online learning is due to access, flexibility, affordability and efficiency,” said Chad Shepherd, SCC chief information officer. “Changing our educational model from lecture-based instruction to active learning utilizing technology and introducing an online program are the primary ways we are addressing this shift.”

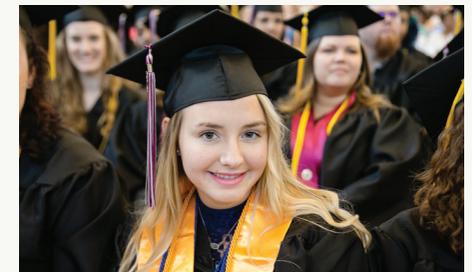

SCC added a new degree program – the Associate of Fine Arts (A.F.A.) in music. “This degree will better prepare students for a smooth transfer to a four-year university as a music major in every track, whether it be music education, business, therapy or performance,” said Becky Thorn, assistant professor of music.

ON CAMPUS, OPPORTUNITIES CONTINUE TO EXPAND AS WELL:

“In order to prepare our students to flourish in an increasingly global economy, SCC has placed a curricular emphasis on global education and multi-culturalism,” said Mike Dompierre Ph.D., assistant vice president for academic affairs.

SCC announced the creation of its new Global Studies and International Student Support Services Division. This area of the college will connect and support initiatives pertaining to international education, making the college more prepared to serve students of other nationalities, send students to study abroad, teach courses about the world and serve international residents with its English Language Institute.

GLOBAL EDUCATION

High-achieving students also find their fit at SCC with the college’s Honors Program, which continues to grow. Each semester, about 55 students take an honors-only course, which promotes diverse, interdisciplinary learning and seeks to foster a community of life-long learners who motivate, support and serve one another, the campus and the community.

HONORS PROGRAM

Embracing diversity together

DIVERSITY AND INCLUSION EFFORTS RAMP UP AT SCC

As part of SCC's ongoing commitment to diversity and inclusion, the college established a council to provide strategic oversight, review data and assist with the implementation and expansion of SCC's Diversity and Inclusion Action Plan, which rolled out in February 2017.

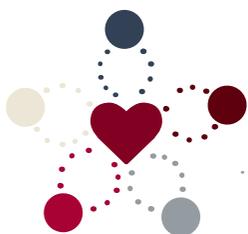

"The Action Plan's strategic directions align with SCC's mission, vision and values," said Sylvia Edgar, chief diversity officer and Title IX coordinator. The 11 goals within the plan are associated with previously outlined college strategies and initiatives, and SCC has already begun taking steps toward addressing them.

The plan called for support and encouragement of professional development opportunities related to diversity and inclusion. Staff in-service training participants completed Diversity 1.0 and 2.0. The curriculum included Awareness: Examining Culture and Understanding: Examining Unconscious Bias.

To move the college toward its goal of recruiting and hiring faculty and staff from a qualified, diverse pool, Edgar became involved with external organizations supporting a similar focus.

She participated in the inaugural meeting for Missouri Diversity Officers in Higher Education (MODOHE) and joined the Higher Education Recruitment Consortium (HERC) Board as its only community college representative.

In response to the plan, the college has also begun incorporating more diversity, inclusion and multicultural global events into the curriculum; identifying barriers to student success and persistence for students from diverse backgrounds and more.

"The Action Plan's strategic directions align with SCC's mission, vision and values."

KALEIGH OLIVER helps carry out events on campus. "SOAR is a great opportunity for incoming students to get their classes figured out and take a campus tour with me to learn more about SCC," she said. Kaleigh, who has plans of transferring to a university and earning a doctorate in psychology, credits SCC with helping her find her passion. "SCC helped give me the tools to move forward in my career. I am excited for the future!"

MORE THAN
3,500
CREDIT HOURS

SCC IMPLEMENTS SOAR, SERVES 280-PLUS STUDENTS

SCC launched SOAR – student orientation, advising and registration – events in summer 2017 to help simplify the enrollment process, save students time and better prepare families for their students' time at the college.

More than 280 students attended the seven sessions, and more than 3,500 credit hours were recorded by students who signed up for SOAR.

SOAR elements included a tour, orientation, parent panel, games, advising and registration. The cross-departmental collaboration among advising, academic and student affairs, assessment, enrollment services, financial aid, marketing and communications, student activities and student success contributed to SOAR's success.

"This event may be helping enrollment, but it's also providing a quality experience for our prospective students and their families as well as strengthening collaboration throughout the college," said Barbara Kavalier, Ph.D., SCC president.

Due to the success of the event and the retention seen in enrollment numbers, a task force has been put into place to continue the SOAR process during each registration period.

"Enrolling for college can be overwhelming," said Brynne Cramer, SCC communications manager and one of SOAR's organizers. "Streamlining the process into a one-day event helps eliminate the uncertainty first-time students might experience and sets students up for success down the road."

STUDENT SERVICES SPOTLIGHT: MENTAL HEALTH

Whether students are celebrating successes or facing challenges, SCC is committed to providing emotional support.

Through initiatives like building a stressless/prayer room, academic success coaching, SCC Speaks Freely forums, SOAR parent panels, mindfulness training, one-on-one counseling and more, SCC has been busy discussing and informing students on all things mental health.

Jonathan Hunn, M.A., SCC alum and professional counselor at SCC, hopes to use his doctoral dissertation research to continue developing even more initiatives to better understand and serve students.

"Teaching and counseling are truly my passion," Hunn said. "I love teaching students and being a part of their educational growth, as well as counseling them, which provides emotional growth for the students I meet."

Engaging our community together

These are our stories

What we teach, the way we teach it and the modifications we make in an ever-changing economic climate are all designed with our students – and all future SCC students – in mind. Through these efforts, we are confident we are creating the best educational experience possible and are developing strong, passionate contributors in our community.

SCC SCHOLARSHIP HELPS FUTURE NURSE

Ju Young Seo has dreamed of being a nurse since she was a little girl. Surrounded by family in the medical field who taught her that helping people can give you great joy, Ju Young was inspired to pursue her own career in nursing so that she can help others.

With her career goals in mind and her husband's support, Ju Young and her family moved from South Korea to St. Charles just a few years ago.

Ju Young first came to SCC to take English as a Second Language courses. Now, she is working toward getting her Associate of Science in Nursing so she can start her career and then go on to get a Bachelor of Science in Nursing.

At SCC, we have students from 37 different countries, and we support them as they strive for something better that only we can offer.

A CAREER IN TEACHING IS THE NEXT CHAPTER IN MEGAN'S BOOK

Megan Gibbs has always felt drawn toward a career in education, and SCC helped confirm her decision. While working toward her associate degree, Megan took advantage of SCC's recent partnership with the Fort Zumwalt School District to get field experience while she completed her coursework at SCC.

"SCC has prepared me to be a great teacher. I can't wait to graduate and officially become one," she said.

Megan received her Associate of Arts in Teaching – Elementary Education in 2017 and currently is working on her bachelor's degree in elementary and special education from the University of Missouri-St. Louis through a cohort program that allows her to take UMSL classes at SCC.

“Throughout our community, state and nation, strong community colleges are preparing students for life and the workforce.”

Rob Dixon

SCC alum

SCC ALUM SPEARHEADING MISSOURI'S ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

Rob Dixon is a proud native Missourian, Missouri state park enthusiast and the newly appointed acting director of the Missouri Department of Economic Development. And he's an SCC alum. Rob's love for Missouri has been an ongoing theme in his story, as has his passion for community college. As president/CEO of the Missouri Community College Association and as a chamber of commerce executive, Rob advocated for community colleges at the state level and gave members and colleges a powerful voice in Missouri. Rob's passion for community colleges all started at SCC, he said. He was 23 when he completed his service to the United States Marine Corps and started taking classes at SCC using benefits from the GI Bill. He graduated from SCC with an Associate of Arts degree with an emphasis in political science. He then received a transfer scholarship to the University of Missouri-St. Louis, where he graduated summa cum laude with a bachelor's degree in international and comparative politics. Later, he earned a Master's in Public Administration from Missouri State University. As acting director of the Missouri Department of Economic Development, Rob leads the state agency that is charged with creating an environment that encourages economic growth by supporting Missouri's businesses and diverse industries, strengthening our communities, developing a talented and skilled workforce and maintaining a high quality of life. Rob is a member of the newly formed SCC Alumni Council. Members of the alumni council want SCC to be an affordable and accessible option for others now and in the future. They are currently working together strategically with the SCC Foundation to launch an Alumni Association in 2018.

Celebrating our accomplishments together

At the conclusion of St. Charles Community College's 30th year, a Winter King Hawthorn tree planting ceremony was held outside the SSB immediately following the college's 'Celebrating you and 30 years' event. Attendees received Red Maple tree seedlings.

The Technology Support Department was restructured to better serve faculty, staff and students. Student assistants now work at the help desk and complete Tier I support, giving them the opportunity to learn basic computer support to prepare for computer jobs in the industry.

SCC's Network Computing Department made cyber security a large priority, implementing a new password reset tool for faculty, staff and students.

To better serve students' needs, SCC's Financial Services Department completed Phase I of integrating student accounts and cashiering functions.

Criminal Justice brought more than a dozen criminal justice-related guest speakers on campus, helping students identify a variety of career paths.

SCC's Foundation increased its endowment by 300% over a 12-month period.

To better our assessment process, Enrollment Services implemented multiple measures for math placement as well as a new math assessment and use of Accuplacer.

Human Resources launched the Gallagher Marketplace for benefits enrollment, providing a variety of plans in established insurance benefits, as well as a variety of new benefits from which faculty and staff could choose.

To better assist students, SCC's Academic Counseling and Transfer Services worked with Instructional Media to create "How to Register for Classes" and "How to View and Understand Your Degree Audit" videos.

Academic and Student Affairs established the zero-credit ESL 115 class, which expanded workshops and activities that were already being offered to further acculturate ESL students, provide them with small group interactive learning and promote conversation and service learning outside their regular classes.

Using a Foundation grant, English began using iPads with Advanced Learning Program classes.

Beth Michael-Smith, associate professor of chemistry, was awarded the MCCA Governor's Award of Excellence in Teaching.

SCC's Arts, Humanities and Social Sciences Division completed an articulation agreement with Maryville University.

The Women's Soccer team won the Region 16 Championship and advanced to the NJCAA District Championship.

Student Activities partnered with faculty and other Student Success staff to create "SCC Speaks Freely," a calendar of monthly programming to engage students in relevant, timely topics.

SCC's Theatre Department developed a partnership with Act II Theatre of St. Peters for season ticket holders.

SCC's Nursing Program improved the test writing and analysis of exams and now have a nursing tutor available for its students.

Our Education Department partnered with Fort Zumwalt School District to streamline and ensure placement of practicum students in K-12 schools. SCC is currently partnered with six schools in Fort Zumwalt where students complete their Field Experience Practicum, which has ensured countless new classroom opportunities for students and strengthened our partnership with the local K-12 district.

A new partnership with St. Charles County Parks offered College for All Kids summer camps at Quail Ridge Park for the first time.

SCC had 100% job placement for Computer-Aided Drafting graduating students in 2016.

To help enrollment efforts, SCC's Marketing Department created online and printed marketing recruitment tools for our dual-enrollment program.

For the first time at SCC, medals were presented to graduating military veterans and service members in recognition of their achievement. "We were looking to establish a tradition for recognizing our veterans and service members at commencement time," said Andrew Gates, SCC veteran services and financial aid coordinator.

CHAD SHEPHERD
Chief Information Officer

SCC welcomed Chad Shepherd as the college's chief information officer, and since day one, he's faced the opportunity with enthusiasm and a history of success.

"Chad is an accomplished IT leader with extensive experience in deploying strategic technology solutions that improve the teaching and learning environment," said Todd Galbierz, vice president for administrative services. "He believes in collaborating with campus colleagues to reach emerging technologies and implement solutions that yield the greatest benefit to the institution."

Since joining the SCC team, Chad and the IT Department have been focusing on improving the student experience and the learning environment. Chad has done this through refining the college's project governance approach, finalizing new online learning policies and procedures and has been working with institutional leaders on new initiatives, including implementing MobileUp and ExamSoft.

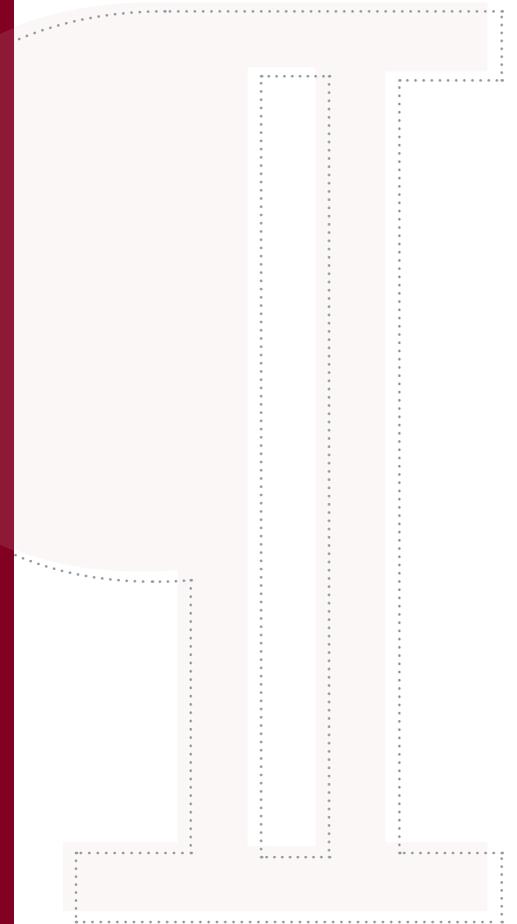

JOHN BOOKSTAVER, PH.D.
Vice President for Academic and Student Affairs

In spring 2017, SCC selected John Bookstaver, Ph.D., as the next vice president for academic and student affairs.

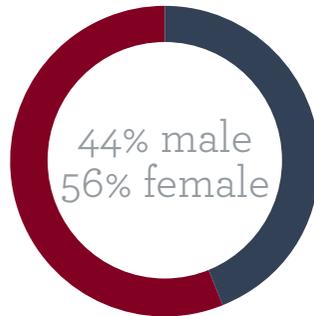

John has spent more than 30 years in education, both in the classroom and in various leadership positions. He began his career teaching at Ursuline Academy, a private secondary school in St Louis. His connection to St. Charles Community College began in 1994 when he took two classes as a student. He began teaching chemistry at SCC in the fall of 1994 as an adjunct faculty. He joined the full-time faculty ranks at SCC in 1998. In 2012, John was named the dean of the division of business, science, education, math and computer science.

During his time as vice president for academic and student affairs, John has focused on developing programs for students and the community at the new satellite location at One Academy Place in Dardenne Prairie and is exploring ways to improve the experience students have in and out of the classroom at SCC.
